

Camping is S'more Fun

On June 22, 2013, thousands of families across the nation will gather in their backyards, neighborhoods, communities and parks to enjoy a night under the stars while helping fundraise for a leading conservation organization.

As part of the National Wildlife Federation's "Be out There" movement, the Great American Backyard Campout encourages young and old alike to get outside and connect with the natural world. It's especially important for kids because, for the first time in our country's history; we have an entire generation that is growing up disconnected from nature. Spending time outdoors, like Campout, makes kids happier and healthier.

The National Wildlife Federation provides everything you need to head out into the great outdoors. The Campout website has packing lists, recipes, nocturnal wildlife guides, exploration activities, nature games, fundraising prizes, and more. You can even see if a large group in your area is hosting a public Campout that you can join.

Encourage your readers to join the fun! www.backyardcampout.org

The National Wildlife Federation is America's largest conservation organization inspiring Americans to protect wildlife for our children's future.

NWF Contact: Christina Batcheler, 703-438-6098,
batchelerc@nwf.org